Ambient music meets science:

Now after the first release of Morphon at the compilation „active agent of sound“ kw002 at the end of 2007, they presents their first Longplay: OM Mars Venus

This CD contains spherical electronic ambientmusic with a philosophic background.

With their project, Morphon, Eru (electronics and guitar), Tom Wölke aka Tommelon (electronics and guitar), and B. Ashra (electronics) are exploring artistically the mental and physical effects of natural vibrations and rhythms (for example, planetary cycles).

The tonal tuning of the music on this cd depends on planet tones based on the "cosmic octave". In 1978 the Swiss Mathematician, Hans Cousto, developed the idea of applying the harmonical law of doubling or halving frequencies beyond the range of audible perception.

This created the possibility of appropriating octave-analogue tones, rhythms and colors related to the rotation of planets, planets cycles and other natural vibrations.

The theory of planetary tones or harmonical concert pitches was also established under the name of 'Ur-töne' (original tones) by the German music journalist, Prof. H.C. Joachim-Ernst Berendt.

In Egypt, India and Tibet, the tradition of harmonical music applications was already used thousands of years ago in ritualized healing and meditation.

The Berlin label, Klangwirkstoff, offers its listeners access to the fruits of contemporary, harmonical music research and constitutes a network for tuned music which spans the micro- and macrocosm of audible possibilities.
